

Table 5.2 Course specification

Level: Master
Course title: Micropedagogy
Status: elective
ECTS: 5
Requirements: none
Course aim Acquiring knowledge about the interaction-communication aspect of education. Training students to develop the professional teaching competencies necessary for ensuring and improving the quality and efficiency of educational work.
Course outcome After attending this course, it is expected that the student will be able to demonstrate adequate knowledge and understanding of the structure of communication and the role of communication in the educational process. It is expected that the student will be able to: assertively communicate with various partners in the educational process; adopt techniques of advisory work; apply active listening skills; organizes and participates in team and workshop activities; To master learning techniques for the purpose of continuous professional development and development of his/her own professional competences.
Course content  Theory Aspects of education: social-generational, individual and interaction-communicational. Communication Theories. Forms of communication. Verbal and nonverbal communication in the educational process. The concept, characteristics and specificities of mutual relations in the educational work. Elements of a successful relationship student-teacher-parent. Cooperation and advisory work with parents. Development of pedagogical culture of parents. Principles of effective communication in teaching and its implications. The complementarity of roles. Role-playing. Interpersonal relations. Conflicts and ways of resolving them. Features of interaction and communication in class, grade. Personality, attitudes and professional competence of teachers and interaction in class. Socio-emotional climate in the classroom. Action research on pedagogical climate in the class, in the school in order to improve the quality of teaching.  Practice: Assertiveness. Non-violent conflict resolution. Workshop: The art of growing up, The Art of Communication, Goodwill Classroom