

Level: PhD
Course title: Global geo-political processes and Serbia
Status: elective
ECTS: 11
Requirements: None
Learning objectives To understand political and territorial structures and political processes in terms of the impact of geographic and other factors in the broader sense: geographic location, natural geography, social geography, the character of the state border, regional and economic relations, etc.
Learning outcomes Training for the analysis of political and geographic structures, their functions, processes and relationships, as well as certain theories and opinions.
Syllabus Theoretical instruction The theoretical and methodological basis, the State as a subject of political geography (sovereignty, polity, geography, morphometry, territorial, state boundaries), political and geographical aspects of population (number of inhabitants distribution of the population structures, migration), Structure of the international community (international political groups, socio-political groups, military-political group), Historical review of world order in international relations, international world order after 1991, the issue of Serbia and its international environment, the clash of civilizations. Practical instruction Consideration of cartographic, statistical and other materials to illustrate the theoretical part of teaching. Preparation of term papers based on the data collected and the literature.
Weekly teaching load				Other:
Lectures: 4	Exercises: 0	Other forms of teaching:	Student research:	